Final Decision of a Vexed Question.

Montreal July 24—Intelligence is received that the Guibord case has been decided before the Privy Council in England in favor of the deceased. The case arose from the refusal of a Catholic Bishop to allow the burial of Guibord in consecrated ground because he was a member of an interdicted institute. The Canadian plea was that Guibord owning a lot in a Catholic cemetery had a civil right to be buried in it. The case had been taken through courts here and finally to England where a decision on appeal has just been rendered

THE GREAT SCANDAL

AN INTERVIEW WITH MR. TILTON—HE SAYS IT IS A DAY OF BATTLE AND DEATH—THE SEPARATION FROM HIS WIFE—TALK OF BUSINESS—[illegible] WARD THE WOODHULL [illegible]

Special to the Chicago Tribune

New York July 15—The Brooklyn Daily [illegible] carries its [illegible] to injudicious limit. It goes to the most unseemly extremes in defending Beecher [illegible]

ABSURDITIES [illegible] ABOUT TILTON

And inscription is attacking him. Its last story is that he [illegible] for her alleged [illegible] brutally maltreating her

The Investigating Committee [illegible] determined to settle forever this wretched scandal that the propriety of obtaining Victoria Woodhull's testimony has been considered. It is likely that she will be asked to tell all she knows. A warm friend of Beecher's said to day: Though Mr Beecher should desire it, which he does not, the Committee would not listen to suggestions looking toward a private settlement of any sort

MRS TILTON

Remains at the residence of Edward J Ovington. Mr Ovington's house has been visited by numberless newspaper men but the lady has quietly declined to talk with any representative of the press. Mr Ovington reports that Mrs Tilton informed Mr Tilton on Saturday morning last, that in consequence of the course he had taken henceforth their paths were apart.

TILTON INTERVIEWED

The Union has the following: Mr Tilton in an interview to-day said: The first intimation I had of the existence of the Beecher Investigating Committee was an announcement made to me last Thursday night by Mrs Tilton who informed me on her coming in after having been as I supposed spending the evening with some friends that by Mr Beecher's advice communicated to her through his lawyer she had just been before such a committee, and had answered some questions put to her in advance by that lawyer for the purpose of clearing Mr Beecher of the charges and imputations made against him by public papers in connection with her name. She had been informed she told me that her testimony if given as required would put an end to the trouble, and she was willing to say anything for the cause of peace and religion. In answer to a question whether the case was to be compromised Tilton said:

"I know nothing of future events. I only know my present duty which is to make the sworn statement which I have promised to the Committee of the exact facts in the case. I have tried for four years, using my best wit which has proved small, in endeavoring to cloak and conceal the facts which are now to be told. The responsibility of divulging them belongs not to me, for I would rather keep them buried. This responsibility belongs to Mr Beecher, who has commissioned six men of his own church to examine into the facts, which, when they are made known will put an end to Mr Beecher's ministry. [illegible] show him to have been guilty of a degree of criminality which the world little suspects and to have attempted to shield himself by putting forth another man's breast as the armor which was to receive the blow. As to compromises I know nothing. I shall accept none. This is a day of battle and death."

A SPECULATIVE POSTMASTER.—Omaha July [illegible] Serious charges against Casper E Yost, Postmaster in this city have been preferred by B R Bye a postoffice clerk on the Union Pacific Railroad. THE LAST SNAKE STORY

From the Knoxville (Tenn) Chronicle July 8

A correspondent of the Morristown Gazette writing from Murrysville Cook county Tenn under date of June 30 gives the most singular snake story we have heard yet. We clip the following:

"A Mrs Kennedy, a woman of about 40, the wife of an Irish laborer, living on French Broad street has for several years suffered greatly from ill health. Her symptoms and complaints were singular. She was afflicted with almost constant pains so that she could seldom or never rest at night. She stated that she felt something running up and down in the abdomen that she frequently experienced the creeping sensation which is called irritability. She had been in the hospital here and had been treated for various complaints but found no relief. Her uneasiness and pains continued so were the attempts to relieve her but without success. Not long since Dr Ferman Gyles was called into requisition and took charge of the case.

About a week ago she became subject to uncontrollable uneasiness and begged Dr Gyles to perform an operation for her relief. This he was reluctant to do, thinking it would hazard her life but she persisted in the request and at last he yielded to her importunities when on Friday afternoon last, assisted by Dr James Davis of this place and Surgeon William Allen of Sweetwater he proceeded to perform the operation. He first made an incision about 10 inches long along the middle line of the abdomen. He found a tumor projecting largely about 3 inches in diameter and irregular form. He opened it and found therein two rattlesnakes one 30 inches and the other 32½ inches in length. One of the snakes had five rattles and the other four rattles and a button. They had yellow and black spots on them with white bellies. They were quite lively and would rattle and strike with vengeance when disturbed. They were killed and their skins and rattles are in the possession of Col John Stephens

The tumor being removed Mrs Kennedy was instantly relieved and is now doing well. The doctors calls the snakes crotalus horridus. Mrs Kennedy says she swallowed two small, soft, white eggs that she found several years ago as she was walking out in a field near the Warm Springs, North Carolina. Having just come over from Ireland she was not acquainted with the bird-eggs of America and swallowed these eggs supposing them to be partridge eggs."

THE ARLINGTON ESTATE.—New York, July 10—A Washington dispatch says: The United States Court for this district has decided the action of ejectment in favor of the late G W C Lee, the devisee of the late G W Parke Custis. The estate is mill property in Four mile run in Virginia and is part of the Custis estate which was sold during the war for taxes. It would seem that this decision may affect the Government title to the entire Arlington property, as the title to the two estates is practically the same."

THE CHICAGO FIRE

Incidents, Anecdotes, Etc

[From the Chicago Tribune

THE [illegible]

A reporter met the Fire Marshal [illegible] Bill [illegible] His carriage with its pair of sleek [illegible] was [illegible] at the corner of Van Buren street and Wabash avenue but he was not there. After many wanderings [illegible] he was found. He was dressed in white duck pantaloons and a [illegible] hat [illegible] standing in the [illegible] of [illegible] surrounded by policemen engaged in the difficult operation of [illegible]

[illegible] reporter [illegible] his eyes and down his [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Here is our [illegible] ground [illegible] of stone wall from State street to Wabash avenue. Here the struggle must be made. The wind is lulling somewhat [illegible] and the General [illegible] a handful of sparks from his hat.

And you propose to make the fight right here

Certainly I do. It is a strategic point.

And what have you done

I have [illegible] the fire department around here. They were scattered around on their own responsibility and I gave orders to mass them here—as you see he added pointing to the [illegible] busily engaged in wasting water on buildings that could not in the region of possibility be saved

Will the post office hold out?

[illegible] It is a [illegible] building

You are right on your old ground, are you not?

The hero of Winchester moved off to the middle of Harrison street west of State, and [illegible] At this inauspicious moment [illegible] shower of sparks

The post office is on fire [illegible] It was [illegible] The ramshackle array of buildings which terminated in Smith's restaurant on the east and Buckminster's [illegible] on the west side of State street were in a blaze. The wind was [illegible] sparks around in a fearful cyclone of fire. The corner [illegible] O'Neil's whisky [illegible] began to blaze [illegible] the reporters fell back. The gallant general was in the thick of the fight. His strategic point was lost and the most vigorous efforts were vain

Two engines there [illegible] shouted a policeman. Which are they? yelled half a dozen husky voices

The Little Giant is one

No 7 is another

Save them boys to the rescue ! yelled a stalwart mortal recognized as Jack Harrington

Save the engines

Behold the privileged crowd within the ropes. A dive was made for the unfortunate engines. A crowd rushed forward. The wind freshened and a furnace of sparks preceded a burst of flame from the ruins of Smith

The mob faltered and fell back. Save the engine yelled Jack Harrington and a dozen reckless fellows armed with a rope rushed to the rescue. Engine No 6 was stationed five yards east of the Little Giant which was on the corner. The rope was attached and the splendid horses of the engine attached. Fifty willing hands seized the rope and then came the tug of war. The rope stretched the engine quivered and then—crash, it had broken and the sweating crowd fell backwards. Smith's was fast becoming a blaze of fire and the fated engines were close against it.

Once more boys yelled some unknown voice and again the party faced the flames with the remnants of the rope. The name of the man who roused in the attempt could not be learned but his efforts were unsuccessful. The horses tugged [illegible] the crowd the engine quivered and was about to move when some idiot seized them by the lines. Jack Harrington yelled an oath of fearful meaning broke his cane over the fellow's head and he dropped like a stunned sheep. The horses started again like human beings and with a yell of triumph the crowd drew them out of [illegible] dangerous place. The [illegible] of the Little Giant rushed to his engine [illegible] and finally discovering that [illegible] sound called on the crowd to draw it further away from the place of danger

No [illegible] yelled two or three aggrieved persons. No [illegible] was the remaining engine. [illegible] was in a fearful plight. It was standing on Harrison street the flames of Smith's buildings were licking it. It was in imminent peril. Save No 6 and a dozen or more armed with the self-same rope made for the engine. But the heat was too great at first and the brave fellows fell back. In a quiet moment the rope was affixed to the engine. The word was given and the crowd strained the rope. It was a miserable rope and snapped like flax. The engine seemed doomed to destruction. All hope appeared to have gone. At last when every building was burning in the vicinity a forlorn hope was led by some person in his shirt sleeves. It was a bold a desperate effort and those who saw it yelled in admiration. The flames darted out upon him but the adventurous mortal did not blench. He fixed the rope and like the three Hebrews in Nebuchadnezzar's furnace, passed unhurt through the flames. Once more the rope was seized and strained, and once more it snapped. Pressing's buildings were burning the mob could stand it no longer and fell back. The engine was abandoned to the flames and even policemen and reporters were driven backward by the advancing tide of flame and Chicago has lost one of its best engines.

SINGULAR GOOD FORTUNE

One of the miracles of the fire was the saving of St Mary's Catholic Church, at the corner of Wabash avenue and Eldridge court. This edifice was in the very centre of the flame and was several times ablaze but through the daring efforts of Mr P J Driscoll and Mr Alfred Patch, aided by persons on the street the fire was put out every time and the building eventually escaped through a freak of the wind

BLIGHTED SPLENDOR

Many of the maisons de joie along the streets were furnished by merchants of the city who held mortgages upon the property therein. Numerous piano-dealers and furniture men were to be seen in the excited throng endeavoring to save the articles upon which they had claims. Some were fortunate in their efforts and removed the articles to places of safety further down on the South side and also to the West division

A NARROW ESCAPE

After the restaurant of Abraham Abs No 52 Clark street was all aflame a sick woman who was occupying the third floor and who had been forgotten amid the excitement was observed at one of the windows frantically gesticulating for assistance. A fireman mounted a ladder and receiving her from the window bore her in safety to the ground

EXPRESSMEN AND HACKMEN

Reaped a rich harvest and as usual took every opportunity to bleed the unfortunate persons who (many of them for the second time within the past three years) were rendered homeless and destitute. As high as $50 and $25 was asked to transfer a single load of furniture for a few blocks and in more than one instance the exorbitant charge was willingly paid. There were others however composed of that class of individuals who have made this part of Chicago a bye word and a reproach for years past who took the calamity as a mere matter of course, a little worse perhaps than a 'pull' but still a matter to be dealt with in a philosophical manner. 'A thing that can't be helped you know let it rip' as a colored female of doubtful virtue observed to a bystander. Scores of houses of this character were abandoned by their inmates without any attempt to remove either their furniture or personal property and in more than one case [illegible] were [illegible] angrily seized [illegible]

THE SALOONS

All round the vicinity of the new burnt district [illegible] They were thronged all evening with a thirsty and blasphemous crowd who vied with each other in abusing the Fire Department [illegible] the [illegible] into their [illegible] the fiery compounds for which the saloons of the [illegible] are so famous

THE BATTLE OF THE ELEMENTS

When the fire had reached the corner of Wabash avenue and Van Buren street it seemed to be under control to the westward and [illegible] upon the one point. Two engines had [illegible] and fighting the on coming flames made a herculean effort to stop it. The store on fire was that occupied by Gilbert & Simpson as a furniture establishment and it burned with a terrible fierceness. Engines No 11 and [illegible] To the east and here the danger lay. If the fire crossed the street there seemed no chance of saving the city for should this occur it would be impossible to stand the heat and the stores adjoining the fire would surely go. With these great blocks in flames who could tell where it would end. The firemen recognized and stood to their work unflinchingly. The two pipes from 14 and 12 were siamesed or put into one and a heavy stream of water rose to the top of the five story building. Again and again the flames burst forth in torrents, and threatened the opposite building. Twice they were on fire but the stream was turned upon them for a moment and [illegible] the course of the fire was stopped and the engines again returned to the task of staying the flames. The wind would every now and then in a great gust blow the water aside but in a moment the stream would once more be seen amid the smoke pouring its steady torrent of water into the fiery furnace before it. It seemed small and puny to fight such a battle but here if ever it must conquer. The crowds in the streets

THE TERRIBLE EMERGENCY

with bated breath and as the flames or water seemed to gain the mastery gave forth groans or cheers of sympathy

All hope centered in this one chance, and it was indeed a desperate one. At one time the flame would shoot up high above the surrounding buildings as if defiantly and then again as the steady stream continued to pour in its volumes it would sink to a red glare and writhe and toss as though in agony. For a full half hour the battle continued and never once in that time did the heavy stream cease to pour into the burning warehouse

The firemen were buttressed behind heavy barricades to keep them from being scorched or burned alive and they

in the midst of a danger few would face and the huge engines just in their rear, almost ready to burst with the force they were using kept urging on the only power that could successfully combat the flames. At last the fiery streamers paled and sunk. Again they started up fitfully but it was plain that their power was gone and they again sunk darker and darker. The smoke rolled forth in great volumes a hopeful sign and then the flames finally died away. With a great sigh of relief the people in the streets turned their steps homeward, thanking God that the city was saved. In all the mistakes and inefficiency of the Fire Department this honor must be accorded to them that here they made a noble fight and earned a great victory

The culmination and end of the fire was in the middle of the solid block on the west side of Wabash avenue between Van Buren and Adams streets. Here on each side of the broad avenue was a solid brick front five stories in height. If the fire should cross Wabash avenue it would inevitably destroy at least a million dollars worth of property including the Gardner House the Matteson Hotel, the Exposition building and a massive row of business fronts. The Fire Department evidently saw that this was

and the crisis of the catastrophe and it was nothing else than grand to see the concentrated power of forty engines brought to bear upon this small place. The flames would ever and anon leap up and span the street as if determined to devour the structures in their front. The next instant they would sink in a mass of steam and smoke to burst out again after a moment's repression with fully renewed vigor. The broad avenue was packed solid with people all of whom fully grasped the importance of the crisis. Probably 100,000 people witnessed the grand culmination and close of this battle between fire and water

Some of the Buildings Destroyed.

THE INTER OCEANIC BUILDING

On Wabash avenue next but one to the corner of Congress street Mr J Y Scammon had erected a handsome brick building five stories high which was known as the Inter Oceanic building. In the rear of this was the Marine Bank building and on Michigan avenue his own charming residence. This block of buildings formed a small city in itself. Business and residence were gathered almost beneath the same roof. The destruction of these buildings was a terrible blow to Mr Scammon—a culmination it is sincerely to be hoped of the bad luck which has recently dogged him. He lost an immense sum of money here in the great fire and the fates might have taken this into consideration. But they did not. The greatest loss he feels was that of his library. He saved it from the fire of 1871 and would undoubtedly have rescued it once more had he been in town. Unfortunately he was absent from the city and this valuable collection of books was lost. It contained some volumes of rarity and age which cannot be replaced. The labors of a lifetime spent in collecting what was rare and valuable in literature were wasted in a single night. What is Mr Scammon's loss is that of the city also and there will not be lacking thousands of cultivated people in Chicago to lament with him the catastrophe which destroyed his precious collection of books

THE ST JAMES HOTEL

Was a large five story building covering a quarter of a square and costing about $160,000. It was a second class hotel but in any other city than Chicago outside of New York would have been considered worthy to be called a first class caravansary

THE POST OFFICE

Formerly the Wabash Avenue Methodist Church has been unfortunate. It was the last building to take fire nearly three years ago but then resisted the flames. It was fitted up as a post office at great expense but the end of it came at last. The Government paid a rent of $15,000 a year for it which was a big one. However, that contract is annulled

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH WITHOUT PYROTECHNICS.—A theory is never of much value until experience proves its feasibility. It is held in theory that the Fourth of July might be celebrated without fireworks or their consequent conflagrations and accidents. Baltimore has demonstrated the truth of that theory. The authorities of that city issued an order some weeks ago prohibiting both the sale and use of fireworks within the city limits and they rigidly enforced the order. The result was that not one accident or offense fatal or otherwise occurred from the use of fire arms and there was not a single fire in the city on July 4 except a trifling one caused by children playing with matches. The absence of the usual Fourth of July excitement led many persons to leave the city and spend the day in the country or down the bay and the number of such excursionists was, as a consequence, unusually large. The enforcement of the ordinance against the use of fireworks and fire arms was thus made doubly beneficial. It protected the lives and property of citizens and led to recreations which in many must have proved beneficial to the health of the excursionists.—Baltimore Sun

He says that on the whole he has made a good thing this year on these contracts, and that he had not lost on any contract but this one from the Grove to Astoria, on which he will lose $1,000 a year for the time of service four years. He said that he was fooled in this way. He got hold of a map of the country through which the route lies and saw a road marked out as General Joe Lane's Great Military Road, and [illegible] he had no doubt that where military wagons could pass the carrying of the U S mail would be a sort of easy going thing, and supposed that he could sub let to some poor wood chopper with a cayuse in this county at a bargain of three or four hundred dollars a year. The work on the new custom house has been fairly commenced at Victoria.

Chemainus and Cowichan Districts never promised to yield so largely of cereals as this year and the quality will be first-class. Laborers are very scarce in the districts all the loose hands having gone to Cassiar

Population has set in to Manitoba over the Dawson route. Within a few weeks 700 immigrants from Ontario nearly all of whom were farmers went in that way. Many are also going in from the Western States. It is thought that with the opening of railway communication the inflow of population will be very great.

On Sunday last Rev Mr Maclean of Oakland California held divine service on board the Wm Tabor while the ship was on her way to Victoria. The attendance of passengers of the steamship was very large, and the interest was heightened by the presence of the Madame Anna Bishop Troupe who sang several hymns appropriate to the day and occasion

The Mainland Guardian gives a description of the Wesleyan Church now in course of erection in New Westminster. The building will be a very handsome one of the composite order of architecture surmounted by a tower with pinnacles and calculated to seat three hundred persons. There is a spacious basement divided off into school room lecture room class rooms etc and which will be scarcely less useful in its way than the main body of the church itself

The Victoria Colonist learns that it is in contemplation for Chief Engineer Fleming to visit the Pacific Province shortly, and that as soon as the exploratory surveys now going on can be brought to completion which it is hoped may be accomplished this season the reports etc will be worked up here, instead of taking all the persons and papers over to Ottawa. It is believed that the location surveys on the mainland will be in a sufficient state of forwardness to admit of the first contracts receiving the sanction of Parliament at its next session

GOING DOWN INTO THE GRAVE FOR EVIDENCE.—A correspondent of the Southside Sentinel, Virginia, gives an account of the search for the remains of William Jennings, who is said to have been buried about a hundred years ago near Jennings Ordinary in Nottoway county. The object of the search is to establish a claim to the great Jennings fortune in England. This William Jennings was an officer of His Majesty's army and is said to have been buried in his regimental suit. It is thought that perhaps his sword also was buried with him. Could these be recovered a valuable clew would be added to the evidence already obtained. On Monday morning there were gathered at the old burying ground, which is now thickly surrounded by pines and grown over with cedars and enormous grapevines, a number of people to witness the excavations. Many graves were opened without finding the desired one. The search was resumed next day after the correspondent had left

WASHINGTON LOBBY.—Mr James Parton of New York permitted himself to assert, recently that there was no 'lobby' in Washington and was quite severe on those declaring to the contrary. Mr Parton is disposed of in the following style, by the editor of the Washington Capital. Don Piatt says in reviewing Parton's attack on the press and the declaration that there is no lobby in Washington that at a dinner which he attended here with Mr Parton, where, of sixteen present fourteen—that is, all except Parton and himself—were noted lobbyists. The next time Piatt saw Parton he was seated between two notorious female lobbyists, who, in the guise of writers for the press, were prosecuting wicked claims before Congress

TILTON AND HIS WIFE.—The Herald reporter learned from undoubted authority that Mrs. Tilton went before the Plymouth committee against her husband's knowledge and wishes, and that in consequence of this act of disobedience Mr Tilton had separated from his wife. So from step to step continues this terrible tragedy!—N Y Herald, July 14

MURDEROUS ASSAULT UPON A MANITOBA OFFICIAL.—St Paul (Minn) July 20—Ex Attorney General Clarke, of Manitoba, was last evening struck twice on the head with a shot gun, in front of the Metropolitan Hotel by an unknown person, who escaped. This morning, as Clarke was leaving for the East he was attacked by a crowd of ruffians from Minneapolis headed by Mike Hoy Chief of Police of that city, who beat and kicked Clarke savagely and but for the interference of two of our citizens would doubtless have killed him. Clarke was taken into a car and left on the train but it is feared that he is dangerously hurt being in poor health. Hoy was arrested and held for trial. He is of the Minneapolis party who were imprisoned last year at Winnepeg for an alleged attempt to kidnap Lord Gordon. The murderous attack on Clarke is in revenge for his action as public prosecutor in that affair

PARTY JOURNALISM EXEMPLIFIED

The Bulletin attempting to justify the action of the late County Board in appropriating money from the County Treasury to pay the wages of sixty persons employed to assist the ring candidate to a re election is a fair illustration of the vicious partisanism of party There is not the shadow of a defense for these officers upon principle or upon the law Caywood had been elected sheriff as the railway ring candidate in 1872 and was nominated by the ring for re election in 1874 Under the notoriously false pretense that there was danger of a riot about election time this ring sheriff and candidate for re-election, having one regular deputy and not being allowed by law to have more than one, unlawfully designated sixty—sixty—other persons as deputy sheriffs The real object was to invest them with a semblance of authority so as to overawe the people and thus carry the election in the interest of the ring and in his own interest especially but at the same time not to have to foot the bill for their services himself. The whole thing was illegal, and the illegality of it was well known to the Sheriff to the bogus deputies and to the members of the County Board It was a subject of common fame that Caywood had disregarded the law in making these pretended appointments, for the purpose of extorting from the taxpayers money with which to carry the election More than this, the question of the legality of the appointments came up in Court within a day or two after the election, and the Judge, himself one of the weakest and willingest instruments of the ring, could find no ground upon which to uphold the action of the Sheriff, and pronounced the appointment of this army of deputy sheriffs illegal and void All this before the question of paying the [illegible] officers was presented to the County Board, and yet that illustrious body paid the bill out of the people's Treasury The explanation of this conduct is, they themselves held their positions at the hands of the same ring that had made Caywood Sheriff and were trying to make him Sheriff again As well undertake a defense of Boss Tweed or Credit Mobilier Higgins It is fortunate for the taxpayers of this county that the scheme to re-elect Caywood, as well as to put in a new board of ring Commissioners, was defeated, and honest officers chosen instead The people cannot afford to be plundered by the railway politicians for election purposes

But the railway monopolist's organ says the same thing had been done by a prior Board, and that we said nothing about that If that were true, it would be no defense for the misfeasance of these men They were under no less obligation to do right because their predecessors may have done wrong. But the truth is, we were not in charge of the OREGONIAN at the time referred to Had we been, and had the facts been as stated by the Bulletin, that Board would very certainly have heard from us. We distinctly recollect that if such misfeasance in office took place at that time the ring papers of which the Bulletin was one, [illegible] clear of mentioning it.

Now why should a paper, in order to maintain its political relations, be required or expected to connive at such patent and shameless misconduct in office as this whenever the guilty persons happen to have been chosen by the political party to which the paper belongs? There is no good [illegible] for it, and surely every other good reason is against it. If the Board [illegible] that which has just gone out of office was chargeable with such official delinquencies as we have shown the latter Board to have been guilty of, the silence of the newspapers on the subject at the time (there being then no independent Republican paper published in Portland,) is but an illustration of the utterly unreliable character of partisan journalism There is but one right way in such cases, and if the supposed demands of party did not obscure the perceptions of duty, the Bulletin, instead of trying to find [illegible] wful conduct of [illegible] Board, would [illegible] in condemning it.

THE NEW LOAN.

The dispatches this morning announce the probability of the speedy success of the "New 5-20 Government loan" This refers [illegible] of the old loan, not to any new one. The entire authorized balance when Mr Bristow came into office was about $180,000 000 He had hardly got his feet inside the Treasurer's office after his appointment when he was besieged by a multitude of persons desiring to negotiate the loan who pressed all sorts of propositions upon him. Bankers and brokers were ready to form syndicates at home or abroad, anywhere, everywhere, and upon terms which were declared to be extremely advantageous to the Government To the astonishment of the applicants Mr Bristow did not appear to be at all panicky In fact, he seemed not to be under the slightest apprehension that the Government would be plunged into bankruptcy and the country into ruin, unless a syndicate were formed for this loan forthwith Instead of rushing into the arms of the generous-hearted brokers, he declined all their reasonable propositions, and told them that he would "syndicate" this balance in his own way for a while So he sent out a circular letter to the principal bankers of the principal cities, in which he set forth specifically the condition of the case and the exact amount of the loan to be taken, and invited proposals for the bonds remaining unsold Then he went off to his home at Louisville where sickness in his family required his presence coming back to Washington as soon as he could leave home. Some proposals were now in readiness to be handed in, but the Secretary appeared to think the cleaning out of the Treasury stables and the decapitating of all the Treasury supernumeraries had the first claim upon his attention So he has just now got down to the examination of [illegible] proposals received in response to the circular [illegible] The success of the loan is a vindication of the good sense shown by the Secretary in going about the business of his office in the same straightforward manner that a sensible and self-possessed man would adopt in his private affairs

THE CUSTOM HOUSE RING AGAIN IN COMMOTION

There is trouble among the ring politicians Just the nature of the trouble we can not state positively and not being able to state it positively we shall not attempt to state it at all But they are in trouble that is certain They meet nearly every day and an individual who sometimes meets them informs us they have extremely interesting times Their headquarters and place of meeting is at the house of Mr Ben Holladay where from six to ten of the Custom House ring may be found at nearly any hour engaged in earnest consultation It is said Holladay wishes to shake off the ring and keep aloof henceforth from politics but they have got him so bound up in one way and another that he has not the ability to rid himself of them or to withdraw from their plans Harvey Scott is trying to oust Mr O'Meara from the editorship of the Bulletin so that he himself may again have that position It is not at all unlikely he will succeed, as he is known to have great influence over Holladay, which he takes great pains to preserve and increase His obsequiousness toward Holladay is such of late that he is known of even among the members of the ring, by the nickname of 'Holladay's boot black." If he succeeds in forcing himself back into the Bulletin it will be the worse for the paper and its owner Mr Holladay, but probably better for the ring, as he is a more pliant and less scrupulous politician than O'Meara, with greater skill in the lower order of political management, though possessing not half his talent as a newspaper writer It is evident that some political movement, big with destiny, is just about to take place Scott and Holladay had a sharp passage at arms, figuratively speaking, day before yesterday but they finally came to better understanding and will doubtless pull together in the movement about to be inaugurated The railway companies have not yet freed themselves from their political alliance They and the Custom House are still to be arrayed against the taxpayers and producers

THE OVERLAND MONTHLY —The Overland Monthly for August has reached us. It is well filled with interesting matter 'The opening article is 'Glimpses of the Court of China' by Bishop Kip; Mrs Victor furnishes a second paper on 'The Pioneers of Oregon,' John Muir continues his very entertaining 'Studies in Sierra' and the other articles are quite up to the average of the Overland literature An article which deserves especial mention is from the pen of Mr B B Taylor formerly editor of the Oregon Herald in this city on 'Legislation on Railroad Freight Charges' in which he goes over the entire field of the issues now pending between the railways and the people Those who remember how Mr Taylor wrote while here, may be a little surprised to learn that he takes the railway companies side of the case on every point and urges it with great earnestness His article is forcibly written, but when he says there is a rule of the common law that prohibits common carriers from putting their freight tariffs unreasonably high, thus obviating the necessity for statutory enactments we feel like demanding that he shall produce the authority for the statement Judge Lawrence of Illinois in one case, intimated such an opinion in a case wherein the question did not arise but he received only the ridicule of the bar for his trouble

On receiving the Overland we always look first for the name of Miss Ina D Coolbrith the laureate poetess of the Golden City and we seldom look in vain—certainly not in this number How finely is the single thought gem polished and how delicately is its setting wrought out in these lines

A PRAYER FOR STRENGTH

O soul however sweet
The goal to which I hasten with swift feet—
If just within my grasp
I reach and joy to clasp
And find one there whose body I must make
A footstool for that sake
Though ever and forevermore denied
Grant me to turn aside!

O howsoever dear
The love I long for seek and find anear—
So dear so near the bliss
Sweetest of all that is—
If I must win by cunning or by art,
Or wrong one other heart,
Though it should bring me death O soul that day
Grant me to turn away!

That, in the life so far
And yet so near I be without a scar
Of wounds dealt others' Greet with lifted eyes
"The pure of Paradise
So I may never know
The agony of tears I caused to flow

A writer in the New York Herald thinks it a great waste of time and thought for Mr Bergh and his Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to be experimenting and philosophizing so much over the problem how to kill dogs, when a single drop of hydrocyanic or hydrofluoric acid applied to the nose of a canine will send him through to the happy hunting ground instantaneously A pound of either of these acids, it is asserted, would kill all the dogs in the State of New York and no dog would ever know what hurt him

The once fiery Southern irreconcilable Henry A Wise of Virginia has evidently been reconstructed on special Providence principles Here is his philosophy of the late war There are ninety-nine things out of a hundred in that war that you can't account for in any other way only to say that it wasn't man's war at all, it was God Almighty's war His time had come for the abolition of slavery, and the war was not to end till that was accomplished, and I bless God every day of my life that it was accomplished

The Republicans of Minnesota in convention voted down a resolution denouncing the back salary grab and nominated a salary grabber for Congress, against the earnest protest of the St Paul Press the leading Republican paper of the State The Press can enjoy the consciousness of being in the right but it is not pleasant to labor for the right and see the wrong triumph

The Washington Republican of July 11 announced that it had it from sources entitled to credence that Vice President Wilson would at an early day resign his office Should this prove true it will devolve upon the Senate to choose his successor and the question is suggested whether the election of Carpenter as President of the Senate does not entitle him to hold the seat

The Utica (N Y) Observer—the newspaper which quoted Senator Fenton as saying that he had Mr Conkling by the throat, and thereby got its name into the Congressional Record—now announces that it has investigated the facts and purposes presently to make further interesting publications on the subject

The Secretary of State has officially announced the appointment of Messrs Wells of Michigan, Porter of Pennsylvania Baldwin of Iowa and Raynor of North Carolina as the Commission to adjust the actual undisputed losses by the Alabama and other rebel cruisers

We can't help liking the remedy proposed by Dr Smith of Baltimore for hydrophobia He says it would prove an infallible and invaluable remedy to kill all dogs and other useless parasites

The Albany N Y Journal remarks as a curious fact that nearly all the talk about electing Grant for a third term comes from Democratic sources

LECTURE ON COMETS

At Masonic Hall,
TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 28th, 1874,
BY REV. T. L. ELIOT.

The strange visitor from the outer universe to our planetary system known as Coggia's Comet, has awakened public interest in the whole subject of the laws and principles governing the motions of these bodies and raised the usual conjectures as to their origin and history It is intended in this Lecture to treat briefly upon the following topics

1. The general phenomena connected with the approach of comets
2. The history of several leading Comets such as that of 1680 Halley's and Lexell's
3. The composition of Comets, their orbits connections with Meteors, etc. The whole to be

ILLUSTRATED by CHART & BLACKBOARD
And at the close of the Lecture by
MAGIC LANTERN,
WITH OXY-HYDROGEN LIGHT,
Operated by Chas K Stevens Optician of Boston

CITY.

BLOWING AT THE WRECK.—Two attempts were made yesterday to blow up the old wreck—one a little after 12 o clock and the [illegible] about [illegible] o clock. Quantities of the explosive material were lowered to the deck of the [illegible] above where the old hull lies imbedded by means of a cord and ignited with a water-proof fuse. The report could plainly be heard a long distance and the water for the area of several rods around was thrown into violent agitation. Even the wharf and buildings contiguous to the explosion were caused to vibrate as if disturbed by a shock of earthquake. [illegible] the violence of the blast did not appear to disturb the wreck. Immediately following each explosion fragments of wood came to the surface. These fragments appeared to [illegible] trunk of a tree which was reached by the shock. No portion of the vessel has been brought up and the result produced by the explosions thus far must remain a matter of conjecture. Efforts will be renewed to-day to blow up the submerged craft with a better measure of success than has thus resulted it is hoped.

LECTURE ON COMETS.—On next Tuesday evening Rev T L Eliot of the First Unitarian Church will deliver a lecture at Masonic Hall [illegible] on the subject of comets. Mr Eliot is a popular and pleasing speaker and his lecture cannot fail to prove both interesting and instructive to the public. The speaker has given the subject of astronomy careful and patient study, and will be able to say much of profit to the audience. The subject of comets in general Mr Eliot has given particular attention and the public may rest assured that he will be thoroughly conversant with that branch of astronomy. The new visitor which has appeared in the northern heavens for several weeks past, commonly known as "Coggia's comet," will receive at the speaker's hands particular attention. Mr Eliot will illustrate his lecture throughout by chart and blackboard. At the close a number of fine astronomical views will be exhibited by the magic lantern, with oxy-hydrogen light which will be under the personal management of Mr Chas K Stevens of Boston.

FOR FIRE PURPOSES.—An ordinance passed the Common Council last night authorizing the purchase of lot No 6, 50x100 feet in block No 50 situated between Morrison and Yamhill streets on the east side of Fourth. The intention of the Council is to have erected on the property when the purchase is consummated, a suitable house for Vigilance Hook & Ladder Company and a tower for the large alarm bell lately received from the East. A portion of the lot will also be set apart as a reparation yard for the storage of extra hose and other implements belonging to the Fire Department not in use. The site is eligible and the price $2,000 is perhaps as little as a lot with the advantages that the one in question possesses could be purchased for. At last we hope soon to see some provision made for hanging the large bell, and that it will not much longer obstruct the sidewalk where it now lies. It might be of much service if a fire should break out if it were hung, but where it is it is only a nuisance.

WILL BE LAUNCHED.—This afternoon, at 3 o clock, the mammoth barge which has been constructed at the boneyard by the O S N Company is to be launched from the ways, and as the new craft glides into her native element will be christened. The dimensions of the new barge are length over all 192 feet, beam 31 feet, hold 10 feet. She is the largest craft of the kind which has yet ploughed these waters, and will have a carrying capacity of about 500 tons. Mr J F Steffen the well known boat builder is the contractor. This barge is very powerfully constructed, and used for lighterage purposes will be a valuable acquisition to the company on the lower Columbia and Willamette rivers. Boiler engines and machinery can be placed in this barge whenever the demands of trade will warrant such an outlay, as the craft was built with express reference to this object. Persons who desire to witness the launch should be at the boneyard promptly at 3 o clock.

NO SERVICE.—Service, it was announced, would be held in the First Baptist Church of this city on Sunday evening by the newly arrived pastor Rev D J Pierce. Subsequently other arrangements were effected, and owing to the religious exercises to be held at the Taylor street Church under the auspices of the Bible Society there will be no service at all at the Baptist Church to-morrow evening. Rev Mr Pierce will be present and participate in the exercises at the former church. Regular service will be held at the Baptist Church in the forenoon.

THE BONDHOLDERS.—Early yesterday morning the German bondholders of the Oregon and California Railroad took the westside cars and went out to St Joe. At that point the party was provided with a barouche and [illegible] Yesterday afternoon the pleasure seekers started up on the eastside [illegible] party arrived [illegible] they will [illegible] and the [illegible] be whirled back to Portland this evening [illegible] steamer.

DISCHARGED.—A [illegible] named Gardner who [illegible] testimony [illegible] with a [illegible] German [illegible] Benson at the Globe Hotel on Wednesday evening, was called up before [illegible] yesterday morning. He was charged with committing an assault. An investigation of the case took place when it appearing to the Court that Gardner was not at fault he was discharged.

AFLOAT AGAIN.—Our readers have no occasion to forget the little schooner Ida [illegible], stranded some months ago off Tillamook Head concerning which numerous paragraphs were written from time to time. We learn that after many unsuccessful attempts to launch the craft by the owner Capt I Corno [illegible] she is at length got afloat. She has been overhauled and repaired, and will soon be on the way to this port with a full cargo.

UNION MEETING.—The annual sermon before the Oregon State Bible Society will be delivered by the Rev J Thompson general superintendent of the American Bible Society on the Pacific Coast in the Methodist Church on Sabbath evening next 26th inst. Services to commence at [illegible]. The Baptist, Congregational, Unitarian, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches have arranged to unite in these services. All are cordially invited.

COMMON COUNCIL

[ADJOURNED MEETING JULY 24, 1874]

The Common Council of the City of Portland met pursuant to adjournment his Honor Mayor H Failing presiding.

Present—W S Caldwell Clerk, J H Lappeus Chief of Police, Councilmen Besser, Catlin, Corbett, Hoyt, Lyon, Moreland and Story.

Absent—Councilmen Thompson and Russell.

The journal of the last regular meeting was read and approved.

MESSAGE OF THE MAYOR

The following message from his Honor the Mayor was read and placed on file:

To the Honorable the Common Council: I have approved the following ordinances passed at your last regular meeting viz:

An ordinance authorizing [illegible] Engine House No [illegible]

An ordinance authorizing contracts for connecting [illegible] with the water mains.

An ordinance to establish the grade of Twelfth street.

An ordinance making an appropriation for [illegible] prisoners.

An ordinance making an appropriation out of the Police Fund.

An ordinance authorizing the construction of an engine house for the use of Multnomah Engine Company No [illegible]

An ordinance authorizing the construction of certain [illegible] on the Willamette river.

An ordinance to amend Ordinance No [illegible] entitled "An Ordinance to provide for licensing and regulating bar rooms and drinking shops."

I approved the latter ordinance reluctantly, having fully submitted my views to the Council upon the question of both regulating the business, as well as the right to derive an adequate revenue therefrom. The Council adhered to its former action. While my opinions have undergone no change I consider it my duty to approve the ordinance so that licenses could be issued at once under the amended ordinance.

I recommend that an ordinance be passed authorizing the refunding to any person or persons who may have paid license for the current quarter prior to the signing of this ordinance. It would be unjust to discriminate against any person or persons because they have promptly complied with an existing ordinance.

HENRY FAILING Mayor

PORTLAND July 24 1874

PETITIONS ETC.

The petition of P J Hudson stating that he had paid $100 for license to sell liquors and asking that $50 thereof be refunded, was read and placed on file.

The petition of H Y Thompson and others asking that an appropriation be made to purchase uniforms and instruments for the Portland City Band, the Band having generously contributed to the public amusement for a long time by their plaza concerts, was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

The petition of Farnsworth & Dalton to be relieved from paying for a lamp post broken down by their runaway team was read and referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Property.

The petition of H Dodge, asking that Hall street be improved was read and referred to the same committee.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The Committee on Streets and Public Property submitted the following report, which was read and adopted:

To the Hon the Common Council—

GENTLEMEN: Your Committee on Fire and Water respectfully submit for your consideration the proposals to sell a lot for fire purposes (annexed herewith) and recommend the purchase of lot 6, block 50.

BASE BALL.

Harper's Weekly contains portraits of the Athletic club of Philadelphia. This club and the Boston are now on their way to Europe.

The second game of the series between the Centenary and Ballston Chapel nines will be played in East Portland this afternoon. Game will be called at 2 o clock.

The following games for the championship, July 7th—Hartford 10, Philadelphia 2; Atlantic [illegible] Athletic [illegible]. 8th—Chicago 9, Baltimore 1. Atlantic 11, Philadelphia 5. 9th—Philadelphia [illegible] Mutual [illegible] Boston 14, Atlantic 9. 10th—Hartford 10, Mutual 4. 11th—Chicago 17, Baltimore 12. Atlantic [illegible] Philadelphia 7. 13th—Chicago [illegible] Baltimore 6. Atlantic 6, Hartford 2. Baltimore 7, Athletic 6.

Brief notice was given of the game played in East Portland yesterday, but at the time it commenced quite a number of admirers of the noble game were present, prominent among whom were representatives of the newspaper offices who came to take notes and we hope they will profit by their observations to-day. Considerable delay was occasioned on account of the non-arrival of several players of the home club and the dispute over Johnson. The Eagles wanted [illegible] to retire and went so far as to prepare to go home. A practice game was on the point of being commenced when the Eagles came in and agreed to the playing of Johnson under protest. The game commenced at 12 o clock and there was nothing remarkable done on either side until the ninth inning. The score stood alternately in favor of each club until the close of the eighth inning, when the Eagles pulled up rivals placing them in advance. Two runs for the Pioneers in the ninth changed it again in the latter's favor. Now came brilliant playing. The Eagles must get two to win. Washburn tallied. Leith went out on first. Fitzgerald ditto, voting Northrup put the side out by the most brilliant catch of the day, and for the time a lucky one for the Pioneers, by taking Henry's fly. This necessitated playing another inning. Northrup struck a fly and [illegible] tipped it. Thompson sent a low one to right and got his first. Wiley batted to right, reached first, and was finally put out there, Thompson getting to second. Johnson struck a short ball and was put out at first. Thompson stealing home one run. Conlin struck out. Bateman sent a ball to Wiley, who picked it up and sent it to Sutherland in good season. Brant sent one to right, got first and second on passed ball and home on Proebstel's strike just second, who stole second and got to third on passed balls where he was left, Washburn going out on a foul tip taken by Johnson. One run and still a tie. The excitement became intense and the eleventh inning began. Oliver struck to second and by site throw was put out at first. Whiting sent one well out and got his first and finally to third through Bird's strike, who got to second. Gearin knocked a nice one to Glenn and went out and before Bird (by Thompson substitute in running) could get back to second Glenn had him. Whiting being left on the third. Here was a whitewash and everything in favor of the visitors. Glenn was the man to get in the desired tally for the Eagles in the eleventh inning and the game ended in favor of the visiting club, 25 to 2[illegible]. Besides the fine catch of Northrup, Henry made a splendid one-handed catch in the fifth inning, but Northrup's being at a critical moment seemed the most brilliant. Raleigh took in a number of flies but was obliged to retire at the close of the first half of the eighth inning—Northrup being substituted who was unfortunate at the bat, having two outs in the last three innings. Glenn, Bateman and Henry did well in the field for the Eagles. Thompson, Wiley and Raleigh did the best work in the field for their club, and the former is credited with a home run. Oliver's pitching was irregular and Johnson had difficult work catching. The general play of the Eagles was good, their batting having been improved. The Pioneers need practice together. Our limited space will not admit of giving individual scores. The score by innings indicates the state of the game throughout:

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES ABOUT THE HARRINGTON SAFE ROBBERY.—Washington July 20.—Testimony was given before the Grand Jury to-day to the effect that the burglar who blew open Harrington's safe and escaped was pardoned out of the Albany jail at the personal solicitation of Colonel Whitely of the Treasury Department and that Somerville the New York lawyer who appeared here on the morning after Benton's arrest for the purpose of defending him, is the man whom Colonel Whitely sent to Albany to receive the pardon from the Governor. The object in taking a man from the Penitentiary to do this is believed to be on account of his being prevented by law from testifying in any case unless he can show his pardon which however has not been delivered to him, but is being held back in order to induce him to keep faith with the parties who employed him to rob the safe. Testimony equally important will, it is believed, be offered to-morrow.

Henry VIII.—People say that our ladies have [illegible] dresses. What would they think if they could have seen a belle of King Henry's reign? A quaint writer says "The caul of net work [illegible] the hair had been gathered at the sides of the face became extended into large squares on each cheek, and the veil which was thrown over them gave them the appearance of Horned Head Dresses." This horn shape was imparted by means of two wire horns around which the hair was curled. Surely our ladies do not thus outrage good taste, but by the use of Lyon's Kathairon render their looks beautiful and luxuriant.

VALUABLE FARM.

AT PRIVATE SALE ONE FARM OF 160 ACRES of choice land situated one half mile above Walla Walla City. It is all under fence with good worm fence. About 100 acres are under cultivation with a good dwelling house and out houses. There are about 1,000 bearing fruit trees of the best varieties on the place. Also grapes and shrubbery in abundance. The place is well watered, lying on both sides of Mill Creek and the whole can be irrigated if necessary. There is a plenty of timber on the place, which is an item where wood sells at $8 per cord.

I will sell the above farm altogether or divide it up into lots.

KATE'S LITTLE LESSON

From [illegible] Bazar Magazine

[illegible] the conductor and Kate [illegible] the steps [illegible]

[illegible]

Here's a place, Kate, have me your basket. There, good bye, and take care of yourself and the [illegible] just as the train started.

Kate waved [illegible] from the window, took a [illegible] the familiar streets and [illegible] and then turned with [illegible] companion in the car.

[illegible] with the soft gray curls on her high temples [illegible] setting off her [illegible] figure. She held the last Harper's Bazar [illegible] hand and was beautifully [illegible] her own [illegible] travel.

Kate [illegible] to well bred to give more than a glance. [illegible] her eyes turned to her other neighbors. [illegible] mother was trying to care for three children, the youngest [illegible]. A boy of two [illegible] hungry and sleepy, was crying for an orange, a thing the train boy did not have. Kate watching, saw a lady just behind her try to [illegible] his attention and to entice him. She took from a small market basket at her side a great [illegible] and smelling [illegible] raisins. It did not please the young tyrant. He wanted oranges or peaches, and Kate, half from pity of the tired mother, half to relieve her own ears, took from her own basket a great tempting peach. She could not reach it to him, so she turned and dropped it into her neighbor's hand.

"All right," said an honest, cordial voice, "thank ye for him."

Kate looked at her for an instant in sudden interest. Forty at least, plain and angular in every movement. No "Bazar" had helped to make up her well worn black alpaca and old fashioned bonnet. Perfectly clean and neat, through [illegible] band box air even in the set of the plain linen collar fastened with a large brooch. She looked like an honest energetic hard working woman, and there was no coarseness in the homely face. She was talkative evidently, and was discussing over the prospects of the wheat crop with her seat mate, throwing in now and then bits of personal history.

"Nathan and I manage the farm," Kate heard once, "and all winter he was laid up with rheumatism so—"

The cars started and she lost the rest. It was not a pleasant glimpse, she thought. Lives all work seemed weary to the girl whose life so far had been all play.

Kate did not know she looked and [illegible] that from the "Bazar." The keen dark eyes were now taking turn in examining her, that they had noted her fresh beauty and trained grace and the elegant perfection of her traveling suit and that mamma's last care for her darling.

But a half hour later, the lady, by accident dropped her paper. Kate picked it up.

"Thanks." Then as she was folding it to lay by, "Perhaps you would like to look at it."

"Oh thank you!" Kate said, with eager gratitude.

It is not in girls' nature to refuse a fashion paper and, besides she was tired alike of the views without and within the car.

"Traveling is tiresome," the lady said, as Kate returned the paper.

"I am not tired yet," said Kate, smiling.

"Are you going far?" in a tone of the kindest interest.

"To New York." And then in a burst of confidence to the beautiful, motherly lady, "I am going to school there."

"Indeed!" After a little pause, "I am taking my daughter there for the same purpose."

Kate's eyes turned with fresh interest to her pretty neighbor.

"I am going to Madame Cardino's," she said, possibly a little vain of the fact. "Madame's" was the most stylish and expensive school in the city.

"Indeed!" in a tone of pleasing surprise. "Elinor goes there too."

"I was there last year," the strange young lady added. "Have you ever been there?"

"No. I've never been away from home before. I have an aunt in New York. That is why I go there. And you can tell me all about the school. I am so fortunate to have met you."

And from this opening, the talk soon warmed into mutual confidence. The stately lady produced her card, and Kate remembered that she had heard her aunt, Mrs Ardory, speak of Mrs Haughton. And at the mention of that name the lady leaned forward and put out her soft, white hand with real warmth.

"My dear, I feel as if I knew you well. Mrs Ardory was with us at Newport last summer. A charming woman. I could not think of whom you reminded me, but it must be her. Do you see the likeness, Elinor?"

"Yes, mamma. You know Mrs Ardory showed you a photograph of her niece. This must be the one."

"Yes," Kate said, smiling and blushing. It was so pleasant to have fallen in with friends. "I am all the niece she has."

And now acquainted in earnest, they were soon busy talking, and Kate and Elinor had nearly decided on rooming together. If Mrs Haughton said to herself that Mrs Ardory's niece was worth cultivating, it was but natural. The best of us have a leaven of worldliness, and it would be, she saw immediately, very pleasant for Elinor to have a friend whose aunt held a place in the mystic realm of Japonicadom. One cannot get along in this world without calculating chances and even the people who think the life more than meat and the body than raiment, do not, generally, lack the graces of the children of mammon. "Natural selection" can be of service even in this; and the very mainspring of life, Mrs Haughton would have said, is to know where and when to draw your circles.

And while they talked, the plain lady listened and looked unseen. You cannot draw your circles so close that no aroma shall escape to the next lower one—at least on the cars.

Kate turned, and rose finally to put the "Bazar" in the rack, and as she did so, caught the eyes of this other neighbor. "Would you?" she half turned to Mrs Haughton for her acquiescing smile and dropped the paper in her lap.

"Thank ye," a hearty, cordial voice said, "I always like to look at fashions."

Kate turned before she could say more. The contrast between her neighbors was too great.

"Isn't she the queerest piece?" Elinor whispered.

"My daughter!" Mrs Haughton said, in gentlest rebuke, but whether at the words or the whisper one could not tell.

They were behind time. They were spinning along at a third more than the usual rate and Mrs Haughton heard from the conductor, an hour later, that there would be no stop for dinner.

"And I am half famished!" Elinor cried.

Kate reached up for her own dainty basket. Alas! its light store had been put up by one unused to the hunger of traveling. A half dozen peaches and as many rolls only whetted their appetites. The train boy had nothing but figs and Elinor looked doleful.

The strange lady, meanwhile, had been opening her great basket and from it came stores smelling of farm yard and pantry. Sandwiches of snowy bread and tender chicken, hard boiled eggs, a glass of raspberry jam, spicy nut cakes and ginger snaps. She had a napkin half as large as a table cloth and on it she was spreading all, while a bottle of coffee richly creamed stood in the center. The two girls could not help watching hungrily, and suddenly Kate felt the touch of a solid hand on her shoulder.

"If I might offer," said the stranger shy and friendly at once, "I've twice as much here as I want and if you'd like to share you're welcome."

Mrs Haughton's well bred astonishment at being addressed by a stranger was softened by the needs of the hour.

"You are very kind," she said with an unconscious mingling in her tone of gratitude and tolerance for the liberty.

When elegant people get into trouble common ones may offer help, even unintroduced save by their kindness. Kate and Elinor [illegible] her with more effusion.

"Oh [illegible] nothing," she [illegible] Mrs Haughton [illegible] a lot of neighborliness. I most generally take more victuals than I need. There's always somebody to want it."

A [illegible] view of neighborliness, Kate thought [illegible] people [illegible] when traveling.

"I thought the widow with her three babies would take it this time," she went on [illegible] but she [illegible] a piece back. Traveling with children's [illegible] hard work. I always want to help a little."

"Yes," said Mrs Haughton [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] and the [illegible] Mrs Haughton was decorous and well bred. She listened [illegible] even asked questions [illegible] personal history deeply interesting, no doubt, [illegible] Mrs Haughton [illegible] encouraging smiles. Kate's heart warmed to the [illegible] woman. "Homely goodness is not so common a thing in the world," Kate [illegible] she had been specially [illegible] and hardly knew which of the two [illegible] have spared. A lady in the best sense of the word which means something more than [illegible] graces, she could tell truth when she saw it [illegible] the answered [illegible] low remark of [illegible]. "What [illegible] looking but [illegible] good."

[illegible] the stranger [illegible] I will be getting out in a few minutes now, and I [illegible] there for me. It's a mile in the country [illegible]" she added to Kate.

The girl shivered as she looked from the windows. A ride of six miles in this cold north east rain. But her pity could not help [illegible] when that great basket disappeared under a [illegible] still larger.

"There's Fishaway," she said five minutes later as the train stopped at a wet station in the midst of a dreary prairie. "Well, good bye."

"Good bye," they all said, watching the odd figure, loaded down with two bundles, a bandbox, and an old fashioned carpet sack, make its way out.

A double wagon stood by the platform, and a despondent looking man was waiting at the steps. His coat collar pulled up, his cap down, a [illegible] whip in his hand. Kate lifted the window to repeat her good bye, and the greetings interchanged floated in.

"Well, Almary, I'm glad to see ye," with a slow hand shake, rendered funny by the lady dropping half her bundles. "I don't know," with great deliberation, as he picked up the bundles, "as Nathan 'ud be able to spare ye. They'll be glad to see ye [illegible]. What with ma's being so poorly and all the children coming down at once, we're having hard time at our house."

"How are the children?"

"Well, Selina's got it bad. The doctor thinks she may be pitted. Worst is the weddin' will have to be put off, and Pru feels dreadfully about that. Can't get a dressmaker [illegible] they're all so afraid, though it's nothing but a [illegible]. 'Tain't nothing but measles, I think. These young doctors don't know much."

"I can tell [illegible] about the weddin' clothes. I can manage." Her face beamed with honest kindliness. "I've got patterns with me and I've seen the latest fashions only this morning."

Their voices died away as they walked to the wagon. Mrs Haughton gave a slight, well bred laugh.

"What an odd person," Elinor said.

"Her ways were fortunate for us, to-day," Kate said. "She had Arabian ideas of hospitality."

"One meets a great many curious people in the world," Mrs Haughton said sinking into repose and generalities. "I only hope we may never meet again. Chance encounters with persons of that class may lead to the most mortifying embarrassment."

[illegible] rare crystal that she feared to touch this common ware! Kate looked at her with an odd disdainful flush in her eye. She had been bred to a broader ladyhood. Mrs Haughton caught the look.

"My dear," she said quietly, "I am much older than you—far wiser in the ways of the world. People of that sort are no doubt useful and good and all that, but the less people in our society have to do with them the better. For my own part I hope never again to be placed in so embarrassing a situation," and therewith the good lady lowered her thread lace veil and composed herself for an after dinner nap.

And this was the stately gracious lady who had seemed so like a mother to her. Kate's heart sank suddenly. High bred elegance might co exist with narrow neighborliness and the very repose of Mrs Haughton's manner might be the result of never seeing beyond our circle. Mrs Ardory's niece was in that mystic ring. Was it for that she was welcomed? Kate's lesson had come in an unexpected form. Her ideal was lowered. And once let Humpty dumpty fall—

Not all the king's horses, not all the king's men,
Could set Humpty dumpty up again.

FEED—Stocks on hand supply the present inquiry which is limited at jobbers paying rates; bran $12 ₩ ton, shorts $18, chop middlings, etc. $30.

HAY—The new crop comes forward freely and prices tend downward, the quotations for baled timothy being $[illegible] ₩ ton, ditto loose $8 [illegible]. Wild is scarcely saleable at $6 [illegible]

POTATOES—The market is full of receipts of new crops of good varieties and quotable at [illegible] The report that in some sections of Washington Territory this crop had suffered from blight or some disease similar in its effects is stated not to be general, but our information only claimed to apply to some fields on the Sound and on the lower Columbia. The matter was well understood earlier in the season, but since that time the crop may have [illegible] recovered.

ONIONS—The supply on hand at present is not large and quotations are firm at [illegible]

DRIED FRUIT—The demand is [illegible] current rates and shipments not resulting in encouragement prices are rather weaker. We quote apples in sacks [illegible] cents ₩ lb, in kegs [illegible] with pits are dull at [illegible] pitless in better request at [illegible]

CHEESE—The receipts of Oregon made are [illegible]

EGGS—The receipts have declined [illegible] during the past few days [illegible] the trade a little short of the accustomed supplies and though the demand for shipping does not justify it, the temporary wants of our home market have raised the price to 30 cents per dozen. Should receipts be considerable these rates would quickly [illegible]

CHICKENS—The demand is not extensive but [illegible]

HIDES—[illegible] Eastern Oregon.

FRESH MEAT—The [illegible] this season [illegible] remain without change.

WOOL—The receipts continue to be [illegible] but will materially diminish within a few days [illegible] most of the clip is out of [illegible] hands. While we would have [illegible] stricter attention to some suggestions as to sorting and packing would have proved profitable [illegible] congratulate the [illegible] success which has attended the season's business. It is estimated that the receipts at this point so far have reached over [illegible] pounds and that the total for export will reach [illegible] pounds. [illegible] Walla Walla Valley wool is quotable at [illegible] East [illegible] Oregon and Walla Walla [illegible]

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 25 1874

KATE'S LITTLE LESSON

(From Arthur's Home Magazine.)

"All aboard!" shouted the conductor, and Kate's [illegible] her hastily up the steps and [illegible] into the car.

[illegible] Kate's [illegible] first journey [illegible] the arrival at the [illegible] full [illegible] traveling bag.

"[illegible] place, Kate. Give me your basket. There, good bye, and take care of yourself," and the reckless [illegible] dropped from the steps just as the train started.

Kate waved her hand [illegible] took [illegible] look at the familiar streets [illegible] were passing, and then turned with girlish curiosity to her companion in the car.

[illegible] look was needed to tell her that the [illegible] were of "our best society." [illegible] with the soft gray curls on her high temples [illegible] well setting off her [illegible] figure. She held the last Harper's Bazar in her hand and was [illegible] Kate's innocent examination [illegible] pretty [illegible] travel.

Kate [illegible] too well bred to [illegible] glance. Then her eyes turned to her other neighbors. One [illegible] a weary mother was trying to care for three children, the youngest a baby [illegible]. A boy of two, hungry and sleepy, was crying for an orange, a thing the train boy did not have. Kate, watching, saw a lady just behind her try to get his attention, and to entice him she took from a small market basket at her side a great [illegible] raisins. It did not please the young tyrant. He wanted oranges or peaches, and Kate, half from pity of the tired mother, half to relieve her own ears, took from her own basket a great tempting peach. She could not reach it to him, so she turned and dropped it into her neighbor's hand.

"All right," said an honest, cordial voice, "thank ye for him."

Kate looked at her for an instant in sudden interest. Forty at least, plain and angular in every movement. No "Bazar" had helped to make up her well worn black alpaca and old fashioned bonnet. Perfectly clean and neat, through a band box air even in the set of the plain linen collar fastened with a large brooch. She looked like an honest, energetic, hard working woman, and there was no coarseness in the homely face. She was talkative evidently, and was discussing over the prospects of the wheat crop with her seatmate, throwing in now and then bits of personal history.

"Nathan and I manage the farm," Kate heard once, "and all winter he was laid up with rheumatism so—"

The cars started, and she lost the rest. It was not a pleasant glimpse, she thought. Lives all work [illegible] weary to the girl who's life so far had been all play.

Kate did not know she looked and that from the "Bazar," the keen, dark eyes were now taking turn in examining her; that they had noted her fresh beauty and trained grace and the elegant perfection of her traveling suit and that mamma's last care for her darling.

But a half hour later the lady by accident dropped her paper. Kate picked it up.

"Thanks." Then as she was folding it to lay by, "Perhaps you would like to look at it."

"Oh, thank you!" Kate said, with eager gratitude.

It is not in girls' nature to refuse a fashion paper, and, besides, she was tired alike of the views without and within the car.

"Traveling is tiresome," the lady said, as Kate returned the paper.

"I am not tired yet," said Kate, smiling.

"Are you going far?" in a tone of the kindest interest.

"To New York." And then in a burst of confidence to the beautiful motherly lady, "I am going to school there."

"Indeed!" After a little pause, "I am taking my daughter there for the same purpose."

Kate's eyes turned with fresh interest to her pretty neighbor.

"I am going to Madame Cardino's," she said, possibly a little vain of the fact. Madame's was the most stylish and expensive school in the city.

"Indeed!" in a tone of pleasing surprise. "Elinor goes there too."

"I was there last year," the strange young lady added. "Have you ever been there?"

"No. I've never been away from home before. I have an aunt in New York. That is why I go there. And you can tell me all about the school. I am so fortunate to have met you."

And from this opening, the talk soon warmed into mutual confidence. The stately lady produced her card, and Kate remembered that she had heard her aunt, Mrs Ardory, speak of Mrs Haughton. And at the mention of that name the lady leaned forward and put out her soft white hand with real warmth.

"My dear, I feel as if I knew you well. Mrs Ardory was with us at Newport last summer. A charming woman. I could not think of whom you reminded me, but it must be her. Do you see the likeness, Elinor?"

"Yes, mamma. You know Mrs Ardor showed you a photograph of her niece. This must be the one."

"Yes," Kate said, smiling and blushing. It was so pleasant to have fallen in with friends. "I am all the niece she has."

And now acquainted in earnest, they were soon busy talking, and Kate and Elinor had nearly decided on rooming together. If Mrs Haughton said to herself that Mrs Ardory's niece was worth cultivating it was but natural. The best of us have a leaven of worldliness, and it would be, she saw immediately, very pleasant for Elinor to have a friend whose aunt held a place in the mystic realm of Japonicadom. One cannot get along in this world without calculating chances, and even the people who think the life more than meat and the body than raiment, do not generally lack the graces of the children of mammon. "Natural selection" can be of service even in this, and the very mainspring of life, Mrs Haughton would have said, is to know where and when to draw your circles.

And while they talked, the plain lady listened and looked unseen. You cannot draw your circles so close that no aroma shall escape to the next lower one—at least on the cars.

Kate turned, and rose finally to put the "Bazar" in the rack, and as she did so caught the eyes of this other neighbor. "Would you?" she half turned to Mrs Haughton for her acquiescing smile and dropped the paper in her lap.

"Thank ye," a hearty cordial voice said, "I always like to look at fashions."

Kate turned before she could say more. The contrast between her neighbors was too great.

"Isn't she the queerest piece?" Elinor whispered.

"My daughter!" Mrs Haughton said in gentlest rebuke, but whether at the words or the whisper one could not tell.

They were behind time. They were spinning along at a third more than the usual rate, and Mrs Haughton heard from the conductor an hour later, that there would be no stop for dinner.

"And I am half famished!" Elinor cried.

Kate reached up for her own dainty basket. As [illegible] light store had been put up by one [illegible] to the hunger of traveling. A half dozen peaches and as many rolls only whetted their appetites. The train boy had nothing but figs, and Elinor looked doleful.

The strange lady meanwhile had been opening her great basket and from it came stores smelling of farm yard and pantry. Sandwiches of snowy bread and tender chicken, hard boiled eggs, a glass of raspberry jam, spicy nut cakes and ginger snaps. She had a napkin half as large as a table cloth and on it she was spreading all, while a bottle of coffee richly creamed stood in the center. The two girls could not help watching hungrily, and suddenly Kate felt the touch of a small hand on her shoulder.

"If I might offer," said the stranger shyly and frankly at once. "I've twice as much here as I want, and if you'd like to share, you're welcome."

Mrs Haughton's well bred astonishment at being addressed by a stranger was softened by the needs of the hour.

"You are very kind," she said, with an unconscious mingling in her tone of gratitude and tolerance for the liberty.

When elegant people get into trouble, common ones may offer help, even unintroduced. [illegible] by their kindness. Kate and Elinor [illegible] her with more effusion

[illegible] a lot of neighborliness. I most generally take more victuals than I need. There's always somebody to want it."

"A wide view of neighborliness," Kate thought, [illegible] traveling.

"I thought the widow with her three babes would take it this time [illegible] she went on, handing [illegible] but she got out at [illegible] with children is such hard work. I was wanting to help a little."

"Yes," said Mrs Haughton [illegible]

[illegible] to the station [illegible] central [illegible]

[illegible] and the receipt of [illegible] grant. Mrs Haughton was decorous and well bred. She [illegible] sound history deeply uninteresting no doubt to Mrs Haughton, but [illegible] smiles. Kate's heart warmed to the cheery old [illegible] manner. Homely goodness is not so common a thing in the world. Kate felt that she had been [illegible] and [illegible] spared. A lady in the best sense of the word, which means something more than [illegible] graces she could tell truth when she saw it [illegible] the last morsel of the cake melted in her mouth she answered the low remark of [illegible] What is good looking and doing good.

[illegible] the station [illegible] I shall be getting out in a few minutes now, and I do hope some one will be there for me. It's miles in the country he lives, you see," she added to Kate.

The girl shivered as she looked from the windows. A ride of six miles in this cold north [illegible] But her pity could not help her [illegible] to laugh when that great bonnet disappeared under a water proof hood still larger.

"There's Joshua," she said five minutes later as the train stopped at a way station in the midst of a dreary prairie. "Well, good bye."

"Good bye," they all said, watching the old figure loaded down with two bundles, a bandbox, and an old fashioned carpet sack, make its way out.

A double wagon stood by the platform and a despondent looking man was waiting at the steps, his coat collar pulled up, his cap down and a [illegible] whip in his hand. Kate lifted the window to repeat her good bye, and the greetings interchanged floated in.

"Well, Almiry, I'm glad to see ye with a slow hand [illegible] rendered funny by the lady's dropping half her bundles. "I don't know," with great deliberation, as he picked up the bundles, "as Nathan 'ud be able to spare ye. They'll be glad to see ye hum. What with ma's being so poorly and all the children coming down at once, we're having hard times at our house."

"How are the children?"

"Well, Selmy's got it bad. The doctor thinks she may be pitted. Worst is the weddin' will have to be put off, and Pru feels dreadfully about that. Can't get a dressmaker ye see, they're all so afraid, though its nothing but varioloid. Tom's nothing but measles, I think. These young doctors don't know much."

"I can tell. An' about the weddin' clothes I can manage." Her face beamed with honest kindliness. "I've got patterns with me and I've seen the latest fashions only this morning."

Their voices died away as they walked to the wagon. Mrs Haughton gave a slight, well bred laugh.

"What an odd person," Elinor said.

"Her ways were fortunate for us, to-day," Kate said. "She had Arabian ideas of hospitality."

"One meets a great many curious people in the world," Mrs Haughton said, sinking into repose and generalities. "I only hope we may never meet again. Chance encounters with persons of that class may lead to the most mortifying embarrassment."

So rare crystal that she feared to touch this common ware. Kate looked at her with an odd disdainful flush in her eye. She had been bred to a broader ladyhood. Mrs Haughton caught the look.

"My dear," she said quietly, "I am much older than you—far wiser in the ways of the world. People of that sort are no doubt useful and good and all that, but the less people in our society have to do with them the better. For my own part I hope never again to be placed in so embarrassing a situation." And therewith the good lady lowered her thread [illegible] and composed herself for an after dinner nap.

And this was the stately, gracious lady who had seemed so like a mother to her. Kate's heart sank suddenly. High bred elegance might co-exist with narrow neighborliness, and the very repose of Mrs Haughton's manner might be the result of never seeing beyond our circle. Mrs Ardory's niece was in that mystic ring. Was it for that she was welcomed? Kate's lesson had come in an unexpected form. Her ideal was lowered. And once let Humpty dumpty fall—

Not all the king's horses nor all the king's men,

Could set Humpty dumpty up again.

San Francisco. [illegible] 1854 for the treatment of [illegible] Gonorrhea, Gleet, Syphilis in all its forms [illegible] Diseases (of years standing), Ulcerated Legs [illegible]

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of [illegible] he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearney street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor [illegible] seeking out new remedies and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Di[illegible]

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a existence from the effects of secret [illegible] from virus absorbed into the system! Look at the pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and broken down constitutions disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment [illegible] In this horrid situation thousands [illegible] closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies, so that they may be cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his [illegible] and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended [illegible] who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all [illegible] in a few days imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians [illegible] other places. Be therefore careful and [illegible] inquiry or you may fall into the [illegible] charlatans.

KATE'S LITTLE LESSON

(From Arthur's Home Magazine)

"All aboard!" shouted the conductor and Kate's [illegible] her lift of her hastily up the steps and preceded her into the car

It was not a pleasant start for her first journey. [illegible] rainy morning, late arrival at the depot and [illegible] car with every seat full. Bob however equal to the energy planted him [illegible] by two seats turned to ward each other and [illegible] by an old lady, a young lady [illegible] traveling bag

"Here's a place Kate. Give me your basket. There, good bye, and take care of yourself" and the reckless boy dropped from the steps just as the train started

Kate waved her handkerchief to him from the window took one last lingering look at the familiar streets and houses they were passing and then turned with girlish curiosity to her companion in the car

No long look was needed to tell her that the ladies facing her were of "our best society." The elder was a handsome picture of old age, with the soft gray curls on her high temples [illegible] trimmed eye glasses and the severely simple traveling dress well setting off her stately figure. She held the last Harper's Bazar in her hand, and was beautifully unconscious of Kate's innocent examination. So was the younger lady, a girl of her own age, pretty, elegantly dressed and just now restless from long travel

Kate was too well bred to give more than a glance. Then her eyes turned to her other neighbors. Opposite her lowered down a weary mother was trying to care for three children, the youngest baby in arms. A boy of two, hungry and [illegible], was crying for an orange, a thing the train boy did not have. Kate watching saw a lady just behind her try to get his attention and to entice him she took from a small market basket at her side a great doughnut smeared and smelling of spice raisins. It did not please the young tyrant. He wanted "oranges or peaches," and Kate half from pity of the tired mother, half to relieve her own ears took from her own basket a great, tempting peach. She could not reach it to him, so she turned and dropped it into her neighbor's hand.

"All right," said an honest, cordial voice, "thank ye for him"

Kate looked at her for an instant in sudden interest. Forty at least plain and angular in every movement. No "Bazar" had [illegible] to make up her well worn black alpaca and old-fashioned bonnet. Perfectly clean and [illegible] through a "band-box" air even in the set of the plain linen collar fastened with a huge brooch. She looked like an honest, energetic hard working woman and there was no [illegible] in the homely face. She was talkative evidently and was [illegible] over the prospects of the wheat crop with her seat mate throwing in now and then bits of person [illegible]

"Nath [illegible] and I manage the farm" Kate heard once "and all winter he was laid up with rheumatism so—"

The cars started and she lost the rest. "It was not a [illegible] glimpse, she thought. Lives all work seemed weary to the girl whose life so far had been all play

Kate did not know she looked and listened that, from the "Bazar" the keen, dark eyes were now taking turn in examining her that they had noted her fresh beauty and framed grace and the elegant perfection of her traveling [illegible] and that [illegible] care for her darling.

But, a half hour later, the lady, by accident, dropped her paper. Kate picked it up

"[illegible]" [illegible] she was folding it to lay by, "Perhaps you would like to look at it"

"Oh, thank you!" Kate said, with eager gratitude.

It is not in girls' nature to refuse a fashion paper and, besides, she was tired alike of the views without and within the car

"Traveling is tiresome," the lady said, as Kate [illegible]

"I am not [illegible] yet," said Kate, smiling

"Are you going far?" in a tone of the kindest [illegible]

"To New York." And then in a burst of confidence to the beautiful motherly lady "I am going to school there"

"Indeed!" After a little pause "I am taking my daughter there for the same purpose."

Kate's [illegible] to her pretty [illegible]

"I am going to Madame Cardinos," she said, possibly a little vain of the fact. "Madame's was the [illegible] stylish and expensive school in the city

"Indeed!" in a tone of pleasing surprise "Elinor goes [illegible] too."

"I was [illegible]," the [illegible] young lady [illegible] "Have you ever been there?"

"No, I've never been away from home before. I have an aunt in New York. That is why I go there. And you can tell me all about the school. I am so fortunate to have met you."

And from this opening, the talk soon warmed into mutual confidence. The stately lady produced her card and Kate remembered that she had [illegible] her aunt, Mrs. Ardory, speak of Mrs. Haughton. And at the mention of that name the lady leaned forward and put out her [illegible] hand with real warmth

"My dear, I feel as if I knew you well. Mrs Ardory was with us at Newport last summer. A charming woman. I could not think of whom you reminded me but it must be her. Do you see the likeness, Elinor

"Yes, mamma. You know Mrs. Ardory showed you a photograph of her niece. This must be the one."

"Yes," Kate said, smiling and blushing. It was so pl[easant] to have fallen in with friends "I am all the [illegible] she has."

And now acquainted in earnest, they were soon [illegible] and Kate and Elinor had nearly [illegible] on rooming together. If Mrs. Haughton said to [illegible] "If that Mrs. Ardory's niece was worth cultivating, it was but natural. The best of us [illegible] a leaven of worl[dliness], and it would be, she saw immediately, [illegible] for Elinor to have a friend who [illegible] held a place in the mystic realm of Japan[illegible] One cannot get along in this world without calculating chances and even those who think the life more than meat and the body than raiment, do not generally lack the graces of the children of mammon. "Natural selection" can be of service [illegible] mainspring of life, Mrs Haughton would have said, is to know where and when to draw your circles

And while they talked, the plain lady listened and looked uneasy. You cannot draw your circles so close that no aroma shall escape to the [illegible] one at least on the cars

Kate turned, and rose finally to put the "Bazar" in the rack, and as she did so, caught the eyes of this other neighbor. "Would you?" she half turned to Mrs. Haughton for her acquiescing smile and dropped the paper in her lap.

"Thank [illegible]," a [illegible] cordial voice said, "I always like to look at fashions"

Kate turned before she could say more. The contrast between her neighbors was too great.

"Isn't she the queerest piece?" Elinor whispered

"My daughter!" Mrs Haughton said, in gentlest rebuke, but whether at the words or the whisper one could not tell

They were behind time. They were spinning along at a third more than the usual rate and Mrs Haughton heard from the conductor an hour later, that there would be no stop for dinner

"And I am half famished!" Elinor cried

Kate [illegible] up for her own dainty basket. Alas! its light store had been put up by one unused to the hunger of traveling. A half dozen [illegible] and as many rolls only whetted their appetites. The train boy had nothing but figs and Elinor looked doleful

The strange lady, meanwhile, had been opening her great basket, and from it came stores smelling of [illegible] yard and pantry. Sandwiches of snowy bread and tender chicken, hard boiled eggs, a glass of [illegible] jam, spicy nut cakes and gingersnaps. She had a napkin half as large as a table-cloth, and on it she was spreading all, while a bottle of coffee richly creamed, stood in the center. The two girls could not help watching, hungrily and suddenly Kate felt the touch of a solid hand on her shoulder,

"If I might offer," said the stranger shy and friendly at once, "I've twice as much here as I want, and if you'd like to share you're welcome."

Mrs Haughton's well bred astonishment at being addressed by a stranger was softened by the needs of the hour

"You are very kind," she said with an unconscious mingling in her tone of gratitude and [illegible] for the lit[tle]

When simple people get into trouble commun[ity] [illegible] help, [illegible] unintroduced save by [illegible] Kate and Elinor than [illegible]

"Oh it's nothing," she said filling Mrs Haughton's silver cup from the bottle. "[illegible] always take more victuals than I need. There's always somebody to want it."

"A wide view of 'neighborliness,'" Kate thought. "If people are ever selfish it is when traveling

"I thought the widow with her three babies would take it this time," she went on, handing Elinor a sandwich, "but she got out a piece back. Traveling with children is such hard work. I always want to help a little if I can

"Yes," said Mrs Haughton with an [illegible] [illegible] a pure

The orbit of a comet is a puzzle no doubt to the staid earth which goes over round its central sun

The new neighbor [illegible] and the receipt of hospitality makes one tolerant. Mrs Haughton was decorous and well bred. She listened and put in appropriate interjections now and then, nay even asked questions of such kindly interest that the social stranger was won to details of personal history deeply uninteresting no doubt to Mrs Haughton, but heard with encouraging smiles. Kate's heart warmed to the cheery old maid despite her bonnet and bad grammar. Honest goodness is not so common a thing in the world. Kate felt that she had been specially favored to-day, and hardly knew which of the two she could best have spared. A lady in the best sense of the word, which means something more than society graces. She could tell truth when she saw it and as the last morsel of the cake melted in her mouth she answered a low remark of Elinor's with a quotation. "What is good looking but looking good"

"I must pack up now," the stranger said. "I shall be gettin' out in a few minutes now and I do hope some one will be there for me. It's six miles in the country he lives you see," she added to Kate

The girl shivered as she looked from the windows. A ride of six miles in this cold north east rain. But her pity could not help her disposition to laugh when that great bonnet disappeared under a water proof hood still larger

"Ther's Joshuway!" she said five minutes later as the train stopped at a way station in the midst of a dreary prairie. "Well, good bye"

"Good-bye," they all said, watching the odd figure, loaded down with two bundles, a bandbox, and an old fashioned carpet-sack, make its way out

A double wagon stood by the platform and a despondent-looking man was waiting at the steps his coat collar pulled up his cap down and a big whip in his hand. Kate lifted the window to repeat her good wishes and the greetings interchanged floated in

"Well, Almiry, I'm glad to see ye, with a slow hand shake rendered funny by the lady's dropping half her bundles. "I don't know," with great [illegible], as he picked up the bundles. "[illegible] be able to spare ye. They'll be glad to [illegible] ye hum. What with [illegible] children comin' down at once, we're having hard times at our house."

"How are the children?"

"Well, Sallny's got it bad. The doctor thinks she [illegible] be pitted. Worst is the weddin' will have to be put off, and Pru feels dreadfully about that. Can't get a dr[ess]maker, ye see, they're all so afraid. [illegible] nothing but [illegible] Tain't nothing but measles, I think. These young doctors don't know much."

"I can fall. An' about the weddin' clothes I can manage." Her face [illegible] with honest kindliness. "I've got [illegible] with me, and I've seen the latest [illegible] this morning."

Their [illegible] as they [illegible] to the wagon. Mrs Haughton [illegible] a slight, well bred [illegible]

"What [illegible] person [illegible]

Her ways [illegible]" Kate [illegible] "She had [illegible] of hospitality."

"One [illegible] in the world, Mrs Haughton said sinking into repose and generalities. "I only hope we may never meet again. Chance encounters with persons of that class may lead to the most mortifying embarrassment.

So rare crystal that she feared to touch this common ware! Kate looked at her with an odd disdainful flush in her eye. She had been bred to a broader ladyhood. Mrs. Haughton caught the look.

"My dear," she said, quietly, "I am much older than you—far wiser in the ways of the world. People of that sort are, no doubt, useful and good and all that, but the less people in our society have to do with them the better. For my own part, I hope never again to be placed in so embarrassing a situation," and [illegible] with the good lady lowered her thread lace veil and composed herself for an after dinner nap

And this was the stately gracious lady who had seemed so like a mother to her. Kate's heart sank suddenly. High bred elegance might co-exist with narrow neighborliness, and the very [illegible] of Mrs. Haughton's manner might be the result of never seeing beyond our circle. Mrs. Ardory's niece was in that mystic ring. Was it for that she was welcomed? Kate's lesson had come in an unexpected form. Her ideal was lowered. And once let Humpty dumpty fall—

> Not all the king's horses, not all the king's men,
> Could set Humpty-dumpty up again

The spirit of economy always [illegible] safety is manifesting itself more clearly in our country now than at any other time since the war. It [illegible] a desire [illegible] on the part of business men everywhere [illegible] conservatism in all financial operations. Economy is one of the prime virtues whether communities or individuals. In all departments of life, whether in governments corporate or private citizen the first step toward prosperity is an economical and careful disposition of accumulated funds. The prosperous and successful man—he who keeps prosperity enduring—that judiciously preserves the money already earned. He who wastes his substance in riotous living and he who imperils his whole fortune in speculative ventures are nearly sure to reach the same goal. It would be well if the administrators of our law would adapt their plans to this system. It is well known that the sources of Government income are the duties collected on foreign imports and by internal taxation. The receipts for customs at the port of New York for the eleven months ending the [illegible] $11[illegible]000. This amount is [illegible] 000,000 less than for the same time last year and $[illegible],000,000 less than in 1872. The large decrease is noteworthy and foreshadows the result for the fiscal year ending on the 30th instant. The change in the tariff has lost the Government $[illegible],000,000 per annum and compelled the late Secretary of the Treasury to reissue $[illegible],000,000 Legal Tender reserves supposed to be permanently retired. There is still $18,000,000 left in the same fund and it is probable the entire amount will find its way into circulation again under the plea of Government necessities. The disbursements ought to be regulated by the income.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—To an outsider it would appear that very little is being done in regard to the new crop but, though things appear so quiet on the surface we are informed that some large contracts have been made for fall delivery on terms reserved. The present condition of the market is some better than it was one week ago but whether the improvement is permanent is a matter of doubt. Quotations are almost nominal at present at $1 4[illegible]@1 50 ℔ cental

FLOUR—The supplies on hand now will carry dealers through the fortnight or so that will intervene before the new crop of wheat comes in. Quotable at $[illegible] ℔ bbl for best brands of standard extras. Good outside brands $4 50@[illegible] superfine $4

Oats—This cereal has declined [illegible] ℔ bushel, being now quotable at [illegible] in sks for fair lots and [illegible]@40c for inferior. A further decline is anticipated owing to the heavy crop soon to be harvested

BARLEY—There is a good demand for choice lots for brewing purposes, and such readily command $1 [illegible] ℔ 100 lbs including sacks. Common feed quotable at $1 40@1 4[illegible]

FEED—Stocks on hand supply the present inquiry, which is limited at jobbers paying rates bran $12 ℔ ton, shorts $18, chop middlings etc $20

HAY—The new crop comes forward freely and prices tend downward, the quotations for baled timothy being $[illegible] ℔ ton ditto loose $8 50@[illegible]. Wild is scarcely saleable at $[illegible] 50@7

POTATOES—The market is full of receipts of new crops of good varieties and quotable at [illegible] ℔ bushel. The report that in some sections of Washington Territory this crop had suffered from blight or some disease similar in its effects is stated not to be general, but our information only claimed to apply to some fields on the Sound and on the lower Columbia. The matter was well understood earlier in the season but since that time the crop may have partially recovered

ONIONS—The supply on hand at present is not large and quotations are firm at 2@2½ cts ℔ ℔ including sacks.

DRIED FRUIT—The demand is well supplied at current rates and shipments not resulting [illegible] encouragement prices are rather weaker. We quote apples in sacks at 6 cents ℔ ℔, in kegs 7c. Plums with pits are dull at 6c; pitless in better request at 15@16c.

BACON—The San Francisco market for Oregon has declined to 1[illegible]c for sides and ours cannot be quoted above [illegible]c. Shoulders and Hams are unchanged the supply of all kinds being rather in excess of than below the demand

LARD—The receipts are not heavy and we quote good fresh Oregon in tins firm at 14 cts ℔ ℔ in kegs 14 cts

BUTTER—The same old difficulty exists in giving exact quotations of this article. A good quality of fresh roll will sell readily at [illegible] ℔ ℔. Fancy print [illegible] on contract. Common ranges from 1[illegible] 25c, while some that offers would hardly command 12½c.

CHEESE—The receipts of Oregon made are light and importations supply in large part, the light demand. We quote at [illegible] ets ℔ ℔ according to brand

EGGS—The receipts have declined in volume materially during the past few days leaving the local trade a little short of the accustomed supplies and though the demand for shipping does not justify it the temporary wants of our home market have raised the price to 20 cents per dozen. Should receipts be considerable these rates would quickly droop

CHICKENS—The demand is not extensive but choice [illegible] grown are worth $[illegible] Spring $[illegible]

HIDES—Choice dry Hides will sell readily at 16 [illegible] ℔ ℔ green [illegible]. The receipts are large, especially from Eastern Oregon

FRESH MEATS—The demand at this season shows less activity while arrivals are batter [illegible] remain without change

WOOL—The receipts continue to be quite heavy but will materially diminish within a few days [illegible] most of the clip is out of first hands. While we believe that stricter attention to some suggestions as to sorting and packing would have proved profitable to wool growers we congratulate them on the success which has attended the season's business. It is estimated that the receipts at this point so far have reached over [illegible] pounds and that the total for export will reach 2,600,000 pounds. Choice Wallamet valley Wool is quotable at [illegible] ℔ ℔ Eastern Oregon and Walla Walla 25@25c

Additional Testimony before [illegible] gating Committee—The Pl[ymouth] Meeting in Ply[mouth] Church [illegible] sistant Pastor Tells A[illegible] Weight.

NEW YORK July 2[illegible].—At a [illegible] Church Investigating C[ommittee] [illegible] Oliver Johnson [illegible] between him [illegible] and Mr Tilton in [illegible] In this interview Tilton related [illegible] he heard it for the first time [illegible] Beecher's conduct toward him. T[illegible] Beecher having alienated the love [illegible] from him and otherwise injured him [illegible] but here was no allusion at that time [illegible] charge that of adultery. Hence [illegible] Johnson did not refer to any [illegible]

There was a good attendance at the [illegible] prayer meeting last night but several [illegible] known members of Plymouth Church [illegible] The hymns given out were [illegible] dence and in the prayers [illegible] suffering [illegible] a safe deliverance [illegible] liday assistant pastor closed the [illegible] out the hymn. Mid[illegible] of confu[sion] were complaints, which was [illegible] After the [illegible] had [illegible] the members [illegible] so that all might hear him. "I [illegible] anxious to hear him [illegible] I left him only an hour [illegible] a half [illegible] admirable spirits and [illegible] he has for years." [illegible] and his [illegible] to get Beecher to [illegible] the [illegible] lieved the pastor was too [illegible] Being asked if [illegible] statements Halliday [illegible] know but he has [illegible] next session of the Investig[ating] [illegible] held Monday night.
